MR. AND MRS. EVERETT E. BROWN.

MOTORING TO FLORIDA

On his way from his home, Westland Farms, Portland, to Florida, where he and Mrs. Brown plan to pass the winter, Everett E. Brown, the Apple King, made a brief call in Norwich Thursday.

Brown, earlier in the day, called at the Hill farm, Lisbon, the home of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Palmer, where the members of the State Board of Agriculture met Thursday to discuss the potato crop.

Mr. Brown has lost none of his skill in coaxing prize apples to grow in the orchards at Westland, judging by the basket of prize fruit which was his farewell gift to his friends of The Bulletin. The plump and rosy windfalls were consumed with the hope that a sunny winter may be the portion of Mr. and Mrs. Brown during the vacation motor trip in the Peninsula state.

West Side Voters.

In the election Tuesday the 1,408 persons who voted on the West Side included 543 men and 865 women.

D. A. R. HOLDING STATE CONVENTION

MRS. JOHN LAIDLAW BUEL, State Regent

With 350 officers and delegates registered the annual meeting of the state society of the Daughters of the American Revolution was held Thursday in New London.

The opening session was held in the New London Second Congregational church at 11 o'clock in the morning.

The opening of the meeting was marked by the formal entry of Mrs. George Maynard Minor of Waterford, president general of the National society of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

D. A. R., and a member of the Lucretia Shaw chapter of New London.

James Morris of Minnesota, Mrs. John Francis Yawyer of New York, recording secretary general; Miss Jean Winslow Cuttance of North Carolina, Librarian general; Mrs. Frank D. Ellison, of Massachusetts, Librarian general; Mrs. Samuel Davis, state regent of Rhode Island; Mrs. Franklin D. Shumway, state regent of Massachusetts; Mrs. John F. Buel, state regent of Connecticut; Mrs. Charles H. Buel, state vice president; Miss Jennie Loomis, treasurer; Miss Winifred, state corresponding secretary; Mrs. Sidney H. Miner of New London, a member of the state board, and former regent of Lucretia Shaw chapter; Mrs. Bryan F. Mahon, present regent of the New London chapter and other distinguished guests.

State Regent's Address.

Mrs. Buel, the state regent, presided at the session. Mrs. Bryan F. Mahon delivered the address of welcome and the response was made by Mrs. Buel as follows:

"Madame Regent of Lucretia Shaw chapter, your gracious words of welcome are very good to hear. We appreciate them. We appreciate the spirit of welcome, warm and true, which you and your daughters give out. In behalf of all Connecticut Daughters here today I bring you greetings, thanks, congratulations. Many chapters throughout the state have done well. They number over 1,700, but then, Lucretia Shaw, excels them all.

"You have given us a president general who had no need of the tin and thrust of political battle; who had only to sit still while 112,000 women handed her their unanimous belief in a golden platter. For this crowning achievement, this event without parallel in our society's history, we do you homage today. We share your pride and joy in your distinguished member, in whose honor you are entertaining this twenty-seventh state meeting of the Connecticut Daughters of the American Revolution. This meeting will go down in our history as the first to be graced by a president general of our very own. To the gladness and inspiration of today we may also add the members of nine years ago when the president general of today bade us welcome at our eighteenth state meeting here in this very church. Some among us that day saw the broad blue ribbon of the president general's office floating over her head. The memories which link together the eighteen and twenty-seventh state meetings will be dear to the hearts of Connecticut Daughters, where Lucretia Shaw chapter will ever hold a place hallowed with affection and pride because on her roll of honor stands the name of Anna Rogers Minor.

"This meeting is also memorable because of the presence of six national officers and the state regents from neighboring states; a gathering of officers such as we have never been honored with before. We give them glad greetings and welcome them to the hearth and home of Connecticut.

"And there is another amongst us today who both welcomes and is welcomed. A new chapter has entered the ranks of Connecticut chapters. On Saturday last, October 30, your state regent officiated at its organization and now proudly announces the Colonel Henry Chapman chapter of Colchester.

"I hope that this chapter is only the first of many others. We must increase our membership and our chapters. There should be chapters in such old historic towns as Lebanon, Enfield, Guilford, Madison, Saybrook, Danford. Your state regent would welcome information about any chapter or eligible about any daughter or eligible woman as the starting point of a charter in any good American home and true may be found.

"One state, Michigan, is fifty celebrating its Tercentenary year by a concerted effort to organize chapters and enlist new members. How better can we honor our ancestors, the founders of this nation, than by this open acknowledgment of debt and this definite resolve to perpetuate their spirit and live up ourselves to their ideals. Now is the time when our country needs this rising up of the Americans. We have many nations among us, we have erected altars to many gods of many strange, radical and visionary creeds; it is time now to say, let us all go from this state meeting with an awakened consciousness of our American heritage and its obligations.

Address by President General.

Mrs. George Maynard Minor, the president general, delivered the principal address of the afternoon session which opened at 2:15 o'clock. Mrs. Minor's subject was Home and Country and in the course of her remarks she said that the development of plans for education in 100 per cent. Americanism was one of the highest forms of service which the society of the Daughters of the American Revolution could possibly render the country in honor of these ancestors who established American principles of life and free government on this continent.

"It behooves every all-American woman, as well as men," she said, "to get to work against the forces of destruction that threaten to engulf all that we hold most sacred. In this situation the National society of the Daughters of the American Revolution finds its greatest opportunity for service. It must play a part in this crisis that shall be great and wise and constructive. A society of over 114,000 loyal and active American women is a power to be reckoned if we all do our duty. We are not merely a social organization, nor one that can be content with the title boast of ancestry. A distinguished ancestry is of no account in the world if we do not make ourselves worthy of it and be worthy of it, we must be a power in the land, working to preserve and perpetuate these ancestral ideals and spirit. We must maintain the ideals of Home and Country, which they save us and which we are pledged by the ties of heredity and patriotism to preserve.

"We hear about the 100 per cent. Americanism as if it were something new. Our society has stood for and taught 100 per cent. Americanism ever since its foundation. That is what it is organized for. Memorial Centennial hall in Washington was built by us as the shrine of 100 per cent. Americanism.

"Home and Country is the official motto of the national society. These words are a part of its official seal; they express its objects; they express the deepest meanings of our society. We are called like any group in the service of home and country and all that this involves. Our country needs this service today as never before, for it is the time when the world is coming to the parting of the ways. On the one hand, the simplest points to home and country, law and order, liberty and constitutional government. On the other hand it points to communism, internationalism, disorder, lawlessness, world dictatorship. They who are wise will read these simple points and put forth every effort demanded by patriotism, equity and common sense to keep the world moving along in the pathway of law, order and righteousness."

Mrs. Minor then went on to say that each chapter should be a radiating center of all-American thought and purpose, overcoming by constructive teaching the destroying influence of radicalism in every form. "Influence of American propaganda with American propaganda; overcome evil with good. Soviet doctrine will wither away of itself in the white light of American and Christian ideals of liberty, equality, fraternity," she said.

"I want to point out just one more field of necessity for D. A. R. activity among the many, many things we can do to keep this nation American. This is to increase our interest in our public schools of our various communities. As a society we have always interested ourselves in our schools, but this interest must be enlarged and our work increased. It is common knowledge that our whole public school system is facing collapse, through shortage of teachers. Our chapters throughout the country can agitate for better salaries, better training and better social conditions for the teachers to whom the education of our youth is entrusted. Only in this way can the stampede of our best men and women from the teaching profession be stopped."

At the close of the afternoon's session there was an informal reception for Mrs. Minor, the president general, national officers and speakers. The reception was held in the church house and tea was served by members of Lucretia Shaw chapter.
